n a remote region of New Zealand, and deep beneath the Earth's surface is the natural home of Antipodes. The artesian aquifer allows the water to flow independently, and needs only a micro filtering before bottling (no sterilizing or industrial processing). It is naturally low in minerality which contributes to an almost non-existent aftertaste, a feature praised amongst sommeliers. The Antipodes company has taken great measure to attain a Carbon Zero Certified status, by measuring and minimizing carbon emissions.
